

XCP Rust Blocker 400ml £13.99

Tester Bruce Dunn

What's good This great value anti-corrosion treatment is a vital part of my armoury. Rust Blocker works by forming an invisible barrier against corrosion on exposed metal parts, so I use it whenever I'm rebuilding or cleaning bikes. I spray it on to a soft cloth and then wipe the cloth over the parts I want to protect, that way I don't risk getting too much product on. So far it's kept all my metal parts corrosion-free. It's great value too, being slightly cheaper than ACF-50.
What's not Although cheaper, Rust Blocker doesn't have the same shine-boosting attributes as ACF-50, and because it forms an exterior barrier it can leave parts feeling a bit tacky if you use too much. I also don't like how it leaves a rust-coloured hue to the metal. There's no doubting its protection, though, so it'd be perfectly suited for bikes that are used as year-round workhorses.

Visorvision Travel Kit £47.50

Tester Jordan Gibbons
Time tested Four months
What's good? The Visorvision kit has pretty much everything you need for taking care of your helmet. Inside are two V2 sponge visor cleaners, 12 Fogtech DX anti-fog sachets, a Raincoat Pro bottle, a Lidfresh sanitiser spray, a Shiner helmet polish, a microfibre cloth, two sets of earplugs and the whole lot is packaged up in a handy Kriega Kube travel bag. Everything in the kit does exactly what it says on the tin, with the Raincoat Pro (a spray that makes water bead up and run straight off your visor) the stand out star. There's a lot of travel involved in working for MCN and I don't go anywhere without it.

What's not? The Fogtech sachets are good initially, managing to keep the visor in my off-road lid fog free but once the visor has fogged up once the Fogtech's power seems to fade and it requires relatively frequent reapplication.

Venhill safety wire twister pliers £19.47

Tester Simon Relph
Time tested Six months
What's good I first discovered safety wire twister pliers when I was doing some repair work on my 1949 Norton and had to lock wire the non-return valve to the oil tank pipe, since then I have been smitten with this very satisfying tool. It's very easy to use, just thread the stainless steel wire round or through whatever it is you wish to lock wire. Leaving enough to twist together, pinch the two ends into the pliers, lock into place and then pull the knurled end. This twists the pliers and you keep going until it's tight then cut off any excess using the built-in sidecutters.
What's not I felt a bit sad when I ran out of things to lock wire – it's the best tool in the world!
